Three Killed in Train Wreckage

Travelling along the CPR track in pitch blackness three miles west of Lundbreck, unaware that a washed-out bridge lay immediately ahead, a freight train ploughed into Rock Creek, ten box cars piling up on top of the engine and carrying three of the freight's crew to death. The accident happened at 12:55 Thursday morning and the freight was running a short time ahead of the regular passenger train which is scheduled to arrive in Blairmore at 1:35 a.m.

Railway authorities and RCMP officials were immediately notified and a call sent for the Coleman ambulance. Supt. A. S. Lamb arrived at the wreck as soon as possible and the work gang is under Roadmaster A. Montebetti. RCMP guard either side of the wreck and keep the curious at a respectable distance.

Due to the box cars piling up on the engine which rests in the creek bed the rescue crew had difficulty to get at the bodies. Two bodies were removed by the afternoon and the third this morning. Killed in the accident, all of Lethbridge, were:

Engineer M. M. Dommett, 319 19th Street south, who earlier this month operated a railway wrecking crane to remove the wreckage from a head-on railway collision just seven miles east of the spot where he was killed.

Fireman Edward Lewis James, 612 Sixth Avenue south, and Head-End Trainman Gordon Herbert Cripps, 533 Sixth Street south, were the other victims.

The bodies were brought to Blairmore. At time of writing we have not learned if an inquest is to be held.

Forest Ranger Irvin Frew was called in to help determine just what had happened. An inspection had been made of the track at 9 p.m., four hours before the accident, and the track had been found in a normal condition.

The belief has been expressed that a cloud-burst might have been the cause of the accident and the onrushing water might have washed out small culverts and bridges in its path.

Evidence at the wreck shows that the water had backed up in the culvert running beneath the track as the water mark runs approximately fifty yards west of the creek bed and had actually run over the track, washing away the supporting gravel and rock.

The rails appear to have been left suspended with no support and the heavy locomotive had buckled and broken them, causing the engine to plunge into the stream.

A large work crew is dumping tons of gravel on either side of the track at the east end of the wreck in order to permit the large cranes to come alongside the wreck and lift away the debris.

Express for the Pass towns was put off at Lundbreck and trucks are transporting it to the various points.

Trees south of the track had had the bark rubbed off them to a height of six feet or more by the flood waters.

Flood Waters Cause Damage

The steady and heavy rainfall of Friday and Saturday of last week, coupled with melting snow in the hills, made many heretofore seemly streams into raging torrents. Citizens soon realized in the early hours of Sunday morning that damage would be heavy as the swollen streams tore into banks, undermined bridge supports and took a heavy toll. Besides the many flooded basements, inundated yards, three bridges crossing the Crows Nest river in Blairmore fell prey to the water. The cement bridge leading to the West Canadian mine at tipple and the one of Eighth avenue soon collapsed, while the footbridge on Seventh avenue was washed away. The town "cal" was soon at work in an endeavor to block the spreading waters and prevent the stream from cutting new channels through streets.

Destruction is general in the mountain areas and reaches far into British Columbia. Kimberley experienced hard hit, where some fifty homes had to be dynamited. Fernie is isolated as far as the railway road service is concerned, bridges east and west were soon washed out. Hardly a community escaped without some anxious moments.

The CPR are striving hard to restore their services to the many residents of this district. With washouts at several places on the Crow line, it seems that the battle with the elements culminated in the serious accident of Thursday morning a few miles east of here in which the train lost their lives.

On Sunday, George "Bud" Dennis, 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. P. Dennis, of Lundbreck, drowned in the high waters of the North Fork river while endeavoring to lead his horse across the stream.

Corpus Christi Parade

(Rev. M. A. Harrington)

Sunday, May 30, marks the celebration of the Feast of Corpus Christi. The feast itself falls on Thursday, the 27th, and is celebrated on Sunday. The words, "Corpus Christi," mean "Body of Christ," and the feast is arranged as a mark of our belief in the fact that the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ is really and substantially present in the Blessed Eucharist under the appearance of bread and wine. The words Blessed Eucharist and Blessed Sacrament are the common expressions we use when speaking of this gift given us by Almighty God.

As a small token of our gratitude and thanksgiving to Almighty God for His goodness, the annual Procession will be undertaken in St. Anne's Parish, Blairmore.

The Procession will leave the Church, headed by the Cross bearers and acolytes at 11:15 a.m. The Altar boys, Children of Mary, Choir members, Sister of St. Martha, Children, Women and Men of the Parish will take up their respective places. The incense bearers will precede the Blessed Sacrament carried under a canopy and flanked on either side by a Guard of Honor and Men of the Parish.

Leaving the Church, the Procession will proceed east on State street two blocks to the bridge, south one block to Main street, west four blocks to 5th avenue (Sartoris corner), turn left and proceed two blocks to State street and back to the Church where Benediction of the Blessed

Organize Chamber of Commerce in Blairmore

COWLEY HAPPENINGS

Opening their meeting in the BESL club room last evening with the singing of "O Canada," some fifty citizens of every walk of life went on record of forming the Blairmore Chamber of Commerce. This title was agreed on instead of a board of trade.

Mr. L. L. Morgan, active in board of trade matters years ago, assumed the chair and Reg. Jones took over duties as secretary. Mayor Williams was called on and in a few well-chosen words welcomed those from outside points. It was unfortunate that the serious accident on the CPR line east of here prevented the Lethbridge delegation's attendance. However board of trade members from Pincher Creek and Coleman were present to outline activities of their respective boards and give words of encouragement.

Following remarks by the mayor, and on motion of Messrs. Costigan and Laney, the meeting went on record to form an organization, the name to be decided after more consideration. A committee on resolutions comprised: S. G. Bannon, G. Rees, F. J. Laney and W. Jallep; while F. J. Lote, T. J. Costigan and G. Steves were present to outline activities of their respective boards and give words of encouragement.

A Letter For Mrs. Smith

By ADDISON H. HALLOCK

BILL lay in bed watching the miracle of a new day being born. Tomorrow, he thought, will be Anne's birthday...and he would have nothing to give her but a letter written from the window and looked at his wife. How young she looked! And she would be forty tomorrow. Unbelievable!

Anne opened her eyes and smiled. Bill turned her toward her. "I said," she said. "Look, we're going to have a nice day," Bill said.

"Mmm," Anne murmured. "I'm glad. Wish you didn't have to go to the office."

"Me too," said Bill. "I'd just like to be home all day and look at you all day." "I know," Anne said. "She turned to face Bill. "Oh, dear," she sighed, "I just remembered. Tomorrow's . . ."

"Yes, I know...your birthday. And I haven't one damn thing to..."

"I know," Anne said. "I'm sorry. It's just that it's my birthday tomorrow. I forgot your gift this year."

"Forget your birthday? Have I ever?"

"No, honey...but when a girl is well, fortieth birthdays should be skipped."

"You look like sixteen."

Anne giggled. "Oh, Bill...I look like an old bag, and you know it!"

The alarm broke in them and Bill got up to shut it off.

Five years ago Bill had gone to winter. His wife to have a nice time. When he returned he had gone on a spending spree. He had surprised Anne with a new radio, a fur coat. He had given her all sorts of extra money to spend on clothes. When asked where all this sudden wealth was coming from, Bill had said, "I'll tell you about it. Sometime I'll tell you about it."

"All these things are lovely, Bill," Anne had said, "and you know I appreciate them...but you shouldn't be saving something?"

"I didn't know you had answered," Anne said, "you deserve a break, and at last you're getting one. I love giving you things, but that's enough!"

Bill's lavish spending had continued for more than a year. Then, one day, Anne was meeting the cost of out-of-pocket expenses when she received a loan company had fallen from a pocket. When Bill came home, she showed him the notice.

"Honey," Anne said. "Oh, Honey!" Bill, holding Anne close, was glad that she couldn't see the dampness around his eyes.

"Our last debt," Anne murmured as she added affectionately. "I've paid our last debt, oh, Bill."

Bill kissed the tip of Anne's left ear. "Happy Birthday, Sweetheart," he said.

(Copyright Wheeler Newspaper Syndicate)

he walked home from work the next evening. He was remembering how swell Anne had been through it all. "It's a wonder she didn't kick me out," he thought. "I must have been out of my mind."

Climbing the hill slowly he became gloomier and gloomier. "Anne's birthday," he growled, "and not a thing. Always before I've had at least a bus load in my pocket. I could see that hill ahead through the living room windows of the little houses they had rented. "Those loan sharks! If I hadn't had to pay out all that dough just at this particular time!"

Anne was waiting for Bill in the front door. She was opening the front door. Anne, looking sweet in a dress six years old, Anne, smiling, Anne, rushing into his arms.

"Honey," Bill said. "Hap—"

"Don't say it! Don't you remember? We're skipping this year."

"I know," Anne said. "I'm sorry. See you later," she said. "I just remembered. 'See you, you look wonderful!'" Then he drew her to him again, and kissed her.

Anne helped Bill out of his coat, took his hat. "Oh, I almost forgot," she said, going to the closet. "There's a letter for you."

Bill looked down and picked up a letter lying on the little table in the hall. He glanced at the return address. "Won't they ever stop sending?" he asked in a discouraged voice.

"Well, let the letter go until after dinner," Anne said.

"Business before pleasure!" Bill ripped open the envelope and quickly drew out the large white sheet.

"Dear Mr. Smith," he began to read that in the letter.

"Business before pleasure!" Bill paused a moment. Then he began to read again, his expression changing.

"...the money you borrowed from us has been repaid in full, and your cancelled note is attached." The letter was in error.

"I think you have been overcharged on this account, and a check, drawn in your name, in the amount of $76.72 is due in our office.

If you will call at your earliest convenience, we will..." the letter slipped from Bill's lifeless fingers to the floor.

"Honey," Anne said. "Oh, Honey!" Bill, holding Anne close, was glad that she couldn't see the dampness around his eyes.

"Our last debt," Anne murmured as she added affectionately. "I've paid our last debt, oh, Bill."

Bill kissed the tip of Anne's left ear. "Happy Birthday, Sweetheart," he said.

U.S. To Build Huge Hangar In Alaska

OAKLAND, Calif. — The U.S. air force is building in Alaska what is believed to be the world's largest airplane hangar.

This was disclosed in an announcement by Judson Pacific-Murphy corporation that it had completed 80 per cent of a prefabricated steel framework for the project.

The hangar will be at a point known as Mile 26 north of Fairbanks. Its dimensions: 300 feet long, 300 feet wide, 80 feet high. Sliding doors will open to a width of 260 feet. This exceeds the wing span of any plane now in service.

The framework, using 3,000 tons of steel, will cost $750,000 alone. It will be delivered to Alaska by rail and army transport.

"Honey," Bill said. "Hap—"

"Don't say it! Don't you remember? We're skipping this year."

"I know," Anne said. "I'm sorry. See you later," she said. "I just remembered. 'See you, you look wonderful!'" Then he drew her to him again, and kissed her.

Anne helped Bill out of his coat, took his hat. "Oh, I almost forgot," she said, going to the closet. "There's a letter for you."

Bill looked down and picked up a letter lying on the little table in the hall. He glanced at the return address. "Won't they ever stop sending?" he asked in a discouraged voice.

"Well, let the letter go until after dinner," Anne said.

"Business before pleasure!" Bill ripped open the envelope and quickly drew out the large white sheet.

"Dear Mr. Smith," he began to read that in the letter.

"Business before pleasure!" Bill paused a moment. Then he began to read again, his expression changing.

"...the money you borrowed from us has been repaid in full, and your cancelled note is attached." The letter was in error.

"I think you have been overcharged on this account, and a check, drawn in your name, in the amount of $76.72 is due in our office.

If you will call at your earliest convenience, we will..." the letter slipped from Bill's lifeless fingers to the floor.

"Honey," Anne said. "Oh, Honey!" Bill, holding Anne close, was glad that she couldn't see the dampness around his eyes.

"Our last debt," Anne murmured as she added affectionately. "I've paid our last debt, oh, Bill."

he walked home from work the next evening. He was remembering how swell Anne had been through it all.

"It's a wonder she didn't kick me out," he thought. "I must have been out of my mind."

Climbing the hill slowly he became gloomier and gloomier. "Anne's birthday," he growled, "and not a thing. Always before I've had at least a bus load in my pocket. I could see that hill ahead through the living room windows of the little houses they had rented. "Those loan sharks! If I hadn't had to pay out all that dough just at this particular time!"

Anne was waiting for Bill in the front door. She was opening the front door. Anne, looking sweet in a dress six years old, Anne, smiling, Anne, rushing into his arms.

"Honey," Bill said. "Hap—"

Organic solvents which attack through inhalation of their vapors, or through absorption when long in contact with the skin, are listed by the department of national health and welfare as dangerous substances. The de-

They tell this about a former devilish actor, who was the singing bartender at a well known hotel a year or so ago, a man with a gift at repartee. He went to California and out there applied for a job at an employment agency. The interview ran like this:

Interviewer: Have you an occupation?
Applicant: Yes. I'm a bartender.
I: Well we can't do anything for you in that line. Can't you do anything else? Can you pick lemons?
A: Can I? This is my fifth wife.

It seems the gate broke down between Heaven and Hell. St. Peter appeared at the broken part of the gate and called out to the devil, "Hey Satan, it's your turn to fix it this time."

"Sorry," replied the boss of the land below the Styx. "My men are too busy to worry about fixing a mere gate."

"Well, then," scowled St. Peter, "I'll have to sue you for breaking our agreement."

"Oh, yes," laughed the devil, "where are you going to get a lawyer?"

HELP IN CASE OF ACCIDENTARTIFICIAL RESPIRATION: Prone Method.

Some injuries such as electric shock, drowning, gas poisoning, choking interfere with breathing and may cause asphyxiation, unless normal breathing is promptly restored. Artificial respiration should be restored to bring this about, but remember, SEND FOR A DOCTOR IMMEDIATELY.

Lay the patient prone, (face down), the head "downhill", if possible, with one arm extended directly overhead, and the other arm bent at the elbow to form a resting place for the head so that nose and mouth are free for breathing.

Kneel, straddling the patient's thighs, with palms of the hands on the small of the back, and fingers resting on the ribs, the little finger just touching the lowest rib, and the fingers extended straight down.

With arms held straight swing forward slowly bringing the weight of the body gradually upon the patient, so that the shoulder in this position is directly over the heel of the hand at the end of the forward swing. Do not bend elbows. Then immediately swing backward so as to remove the pressure completely. After two seconds, repeat the pressure and release, the complete swing forward and backward to take four or five seconds, or 12 to 15 times a minute. Continue without interruption until the patient breathes naturally.

Patients have been revived after as long as four hours or more by this method. Keep up the artificial respiration and do not allow patient, even if he starts to breathe naturally, to stand or sit up. Keep patient warm and if doctor has not arrived by the time patient has revived, give light stimulants, I tea-spoon of aromatic spirits of ammonia in a small glass of water or hot drink of coffee or tea. Watch patient to see that normal breathing continues, and if natural breathing stops, begin artificial respiration again. If necessary, to change operator, the change should be made without losing the rhythm of respiration.

The Dangers Of Soil Erosion

A PROBLEM WHICH HAS ALREADY received considerable attention in Western Canada, but which remains a serious one not only here, but throughout the entire world, is that of soil erosion. The loss of top soil through the action of the weather, poor methods of farming and other causes, has already cost this country a great deal, but in spite of this we are more fortunate here than are the people in some other parts of the world. In a recent address on this subject, Dr. Hugh H. Bennett, chief of the United States government soil conservation service, stated that the people on this continent, and throughout the world, will literally starve to death within the next one hundred years unless more care is taken to prevent soil erosion.

Shortages In Some Places

At the present time, Dr. Bennett said, there are about 4,000,000,000 acres of land suitable for farming in the entire world. It has been found by experts in nutrition that three acres of land are required to provide one person's needs for a "minimum nutritional diet". The population of the world is at present a little over 2,000,000,000, which allows an overall average of two acres per person now. What the situation will be one hundred years from now, if the population increases at the present rate of one per cent per year, and the arable land continues to decrease through erosion, is alarming to contemplate. Should no land be lost, Dr. Bennett calculated, that there would be only one acre of farm land per person, but if top soil continues to be lost at the present rate, the ration would be considerably smaller.

Constant Need For Vigilance

In Japan there is now only one quarter of an acre of arable land per person. In China one half an acre is required for the third of a person, each person. At present the situation on this continent is less serious than in Asia. However, there is reason for concern. Originally the top soil in America was nine inches deep, now it is only six, Dr. Bennett said, and the crop land which is left is almost all subject to "erosion, flood and windstorm". In combating this situation, which could result in a considerable reduction of food production on this continent, the American soils expert stressed the need for "comprehensive crop and soil conservation measures, contour cultivation, drainage of low lands, planting of grass on steep land, irrigation and other modern methods of preventative conservation." In Western Canada an extensive program of soil conservation has been under way for some time, but farmers should be constantly aware for the need for continued vigilance in this important work.

$100,000,000 To Maintain Work

OTTAWA—Although the federal government isn't bargaining for a depression, a special branch has plans for about $100,000,000 worth of public projects ready to maintain employment—just in case—it was learned.

The department of government concerned is the Public Projects branch of the Trade and Commerce ministry, headed by G. D. Mallory, whose appointment as acting co-ordinator was announced by Trade Minister Edward C. Morris.

The big public projects scheme will not be used until normal business methods of holding off a depression appear hopeless, an official of the branch said. It is strictly a "stop-gap" to keep employment high he said, and will not be used until the situation appears to be getting critical.

There is no suggestion that a depression is on the way, it was pointed out. In fact, economists said that Canada seems headed for continued prosperity although there might be a boom-bust cycle as time goes on.

But if the rest of the world has economic troubles, Canada will be ensnared. It's with this thought in mind that the huge public works program is being developed.

At the moment, plans for about $100,000,000 are on hand at present, it was pointed out that a figure about 10 times this amount could be called into use in the event all provinces and municipalities co-operate with the federal government.

Meanwhile, the government is going ahead with its plans for encouraging private industry to expand and develop—to create new prosperity and hold present levels. This is serving a double purpose—to conserve U.S. dollar supplies, as well as to encourage the normal development of new business in this country, it was stated.

Offers Two Camels For Just One Girl

MONTREAL—Next to models, perhaps the most "glamorous" group of working girls in our modern world are airline hostesses—but don't rush into that conclusion, ladies, until you hear this:

Just recently an airline hostess narrowly missed being traded for a couple of camels.

The man concerned was Royal Dutch Airlines, the company that now is negotiating with the Canadian government for permission to fly into Montreal Airport. It said that one of their aircraft had to make an emergency landing in Cairo when an attentiveness and looks of the hostess made a quick hit with the old Bedouin.

He was so taken, in fact, that when the aircraft landed he made the captain offer—he'd trade his camels for possession of the girl.

The captain, whose secret ambition was to ride a camel, was sorely tempted—but finally logically told the man he'd worry over personal affairs and regretted having done the deed.

The hostess is still flying but now gives venerable sheiks a wide berth.

Losses $75,000 Worth Of Gems Through Fake Phone Call

CLEVELAND—A wholesale dealer in diamonds reported to police he had been tricked out of "at least $75,000" worth of gems by a telephone call.

Henry Blank, head of a Newark, N.J., firm, said he left a jeweler's house and his topcoat at the Danford-Lowell Co. and went to lunch.

Later his partner, Felix B. Lowell, received the telephone call. The caller identified himself as Blank. He said he was sending a hotel porter to pick up the coat at the jeweler because he had to catch a train to lunch.

"And don't forget my top-coat," said the caller.

Lowell complied. He said the voice sounded like Blank's, and the reference to the topcoat cleared up any misgivings he might have had.

Wheat Rust Victory Worth $60,000,000

Plant Pathologist Recalls Loss Of $100,000,000 In 1916 Through Wheat Rust

MONTREAL—Canada, through the advancement of scientific agriculture, saved some $60,000,000 through the successful combatting of wheat stem rust, declared I. L. Connors, newly-elected president of the Quebec Society of Agricultural Engineers and Plants, which held its annual meeting at Macdonald College here. He succeeded Fernand Godtow.

Mr. Connors, who is associate plant pathologist, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, said that in 1916 the society suffered a $100,000,000 loss through wheat rust. A break in the breeding of rust resistant wheats was made in 1925, and the scientific research results bore fruits in 1935.

Some four years later, he continued, rust resistant wheats had been widely disseminated, and last year there was practically no loss from wheat rust of the type which was such a menace in 1916.

Mr. Connors said that there was a constant race between the work of the scientific agriculturists and the menace of new plant diseases, insects and always encroaching weeds. This year, he said, there was a new blight on oats, first found at Ottawa and now in all provinces except Alberta. It attacked the Beacon and Garry varieties of oats. There was an urgent need to develop new varieties which were blight resistant, he added.

For the first time, declared Mr. Connors, a great chemical attack was being made against weeds. There were now effective chemicals, he said, as well as technically trained men to use them, and they were a constant menace, and were impinging great sections of Canadian forests and agricultural areas. Constant vigilance and an increasing amount of research were needed, he warned, as well as readiness on the part of farmers to use all the aids which scientific agriculture could develop.

WELCOMING

OUR TOURING NEIGHBORS

(By G. H. SLOUS, W.N.U.)

WITH the increasing number of automobiles appearing on the highways across the prairies and the approach of vacation time, attention is again focussed to the many of our American neighbors who make Canada their favorite vacationland, and will soon be seen on our highways, in our cities and towns. In a recent survey of its readers, the American Magazine reported that one of every two who intend to travel abroad this year will visit Canada, and that 74 per cent. will use the automobile on the favorite mode of travel.

With this prospect in view, and Canada's need for an increasing tourist trade, especially to our prairie provinces, every effort should be put forth by the different organizations and the citizens of towns and cities to do all they can to be given to create a welcome and goodwill to our visiting tourists that they will have the urge to return.

Plenty To Offer

The Western provinces have plenty to offer as tourist attractions in beauty and of historic nature.

British Columbia, with its majestic Rocky Mountains, challenges the mountain climber, and rivers and lakes that are the delight of the fisherman.

Alberta, a province noted for its scenic diversity and its great hills and valleys, over which once roamed the buffalo. Edmonton is the starting point of the war-time built Alaska Highway, on which tourists may travel to the Far North.

Saskatchewan has still its marks of the Red Robe, when bitter battles were fought between the Indians and the white man. It also has its share of beautiful lakes and resorts. Saskatchewan can be called the "Home of the Mounties." Regina is the training home of the famous Canadian Mounted Police, who are known the world over as the police force who "get their man."

Manitoba, known as the gateway of the West, of which Winnipeg is the hub, has many markings of the days when settlers from the East came into the province with the ox-cart and caravan. Its beautiful scenery of trees and lakes is certainly attractive to the scenery loving tourist.

All these provinces have their natural parks and can easily be found of them, as they offer beauty, with resorts and beaches that would please the most fastidious tourist.

Lack Of Road Signs

We of the West, perhaps, have not realized the importance of the many things that help the tourist. It was the winter's privilege to travel through the central and northern parts of Saskatchewan and Alberta late last summer, and was amazed

PANCAKES

By JANE DALE

Lassie, grease the skillet well; rub it with bacon rind, mix up all the best stuff you can find. Flour and soda; salt and sugar; eggs and shortening; and buttermilk. Beat up till light and sototy; mixture looks as fine as silk.

Lassie, grease the skillet well with the selected bacon fat when your fire is burning brightly—can't fry pancakes without it.

Cook them quickly, turn them lightly, so as to size them right. You will see some heart a yearning if you take them golden brown!

Lassie, grease the skillet well, then there is no mess or bother. Slip them over when they're bubbly—then they're brown—drop in another batch. Serve them hot with lots of syrup, then just watch them disappear. Lass, a man's heart is his stomach; feed him well and never fear!

RECREATION SAID HEALTH NECESSITY

Recreation—the spirit of play—is essentially basic and fundamental in growth and life. Dr. A. S. Lamb, Director of Physical Education at McCallum High School, Mississauga, said that "the values of recreation are many and this is true for all ages."

"There is perhaps no force so powerful in removing racial and religious prejudices as bridging language problems, in developing co-operation and one's social nature," he said.

Dr. Lamb added, however, that skilled supervision and wise leadership are essential, because the leader or supervisor can make of recreation a positive or negative factor.

It is the belief of those engaged in physical education that no program of health can be adequate without provision of physical activity or recreation. Similarly, an isolated program of physical activity and recreation is not likely to bring into consideration of the broader aspects of health and preventive medicine.

It is suggested that while education has been made compulsory for all children, the same has not been done for health up to a limited degree.

In this regard, the belief of some physical educators that students in Canadian schools should not only be concerned with health knowledge and health practices, but should also develop a sense of responsibility for identifying their own health problems, and also the problems of their homes, schools and communities.

It is suggested further that it is not too much to expect high school students to be immunized against common cold, tuberculosis, smallpox, typhoid fever, venereal diseases, whooping cough, and many of the other ills, many of them preventable, which plague the human race.

STUCK BY LIGHTNING.—A bolt of lightning struck Mrs. Kelsey (shown above), in her Burford, Ont., home recently, but she said she didn't feel anything, although the heel of her shoe she was wearing was torn off.

RARE PHENOMON

Rain storms during which fish fall with the rain have been recorded, but it is a rare phenomenon caused when the centre of a tornado exerts a powerful updraft which sucks up the fish.

World's Wheat Queen Wants Two More Victories Before Retiring

VANCOUVER.—World Wheat Queen Mrs. Amy Kelsey of Erickson, B.C., is going to stop growing the best wheat in the world. But before she retires the 56-year-old Creston Valley woman wants to win more awards to bring her grand total to 50.

She hopes to win awards in Vancouver's Fall Fair, National Exhibition in August and wants to hold for another year the International Wheat Queen title she won at the International Grain and Livestock Exhibition in Chicago in 1946.

"After that," she says, "the men can have it."

Mrs. Kelsey, wife of a Kootenay fruit farmer who besides having farmed at the Chicago Exhibition, was named "World Wheat Queen" at the Toronto Royal Winter Fair last December, gives reasons for retiring.

Her hobby has not been good and she has been forced to spend the winter months indoors.

Mr. and Mrs. Kelsey are now "looking around" for a place on the coast, in a "warmer, drier" climate.

When she returns in August, the 20-year trouper that she has rewarded Mrs. Kelsey at the Toronto Fair last year will be sent to Victoria to be put on public display in the Parliament Buildings.

Mrs. Kelsey will get a miniature version of the original trophy.

A report last November said Mrs. Kelsey would get $2,000 for her prize-winning red spring wheat. She received $20.

"I've never had anything that brings in so many," she said.

Now she plans to turn her attention among them, songs and verse and short stories.

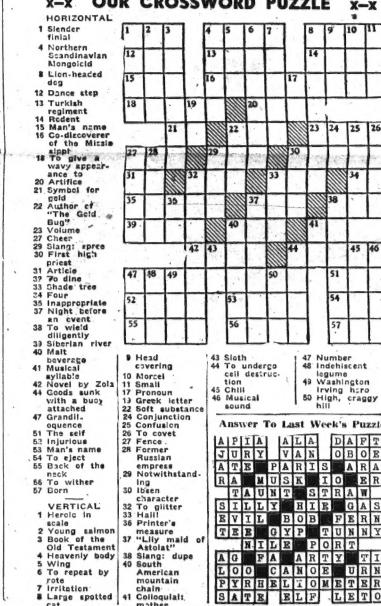

In 1935 only 11 per cent. of United States farms had electricity. Today more than 61 per cent. have it.

A FARM
STORAGE TANK
DOESN'T "COST"

IT PAYS!

A farm storage tank pays 5 ways. First and foremost, it permits you to buy and store enough fuel at one time to be sure of having a supply on hand when you need it. No costly delays when tractors stand idle, waiting for fuel to be delivered.

Second, it helps to keep fuel clean and avoid plugging of fuel lines and carburetors with grit, dust or water. The tank can be mounted with enough slant to cause any impurities to settle away from the outlet.

Third, it saves time in re-fueling tractors and trucks, if the tank is mounted overhead. Gravity flow is quicker than pumping or pouring. And fourth, it prevents the spillage of the "last gallon" that is often left in the bottom of each barrel.

Last but not least, a farm storage tank pays in added safety, because it can be located well away from house, barn or sheds.

Tanks come in three sizes. The price is reasonable. See your Imperial Oil Agent.
